Not sure if you saw this earlier:
It may be easier for me to do the average number of fights in a career – will that be better?
Perhaps average number of fights and average length of career?

Below is the Average length of time between the First Fight and Last Fight, based on the first year they fought for the UFC.
Fighters with only 1 appearance were given a 0.5 (6 month term w UFC).
New fighters who fought the first time in 2014 were also given a 0.5 for duration.

I.e. Fighters who fought their first fight in 2005 had, on average, a 4.11 year career.
I believe the number drops significantly in 2012 because we started signing local fighters to single fights to perform at local events on the undercard.

Overall, 1993 – 2014 avg time between first and last fight, all fighters, is 2.46 years.

If we count people with only 1 fight as having a 0 year career as opposed to a 6 month (0.5) career, the average drops to 1.88 years per a career. This makes the most sense, b/c average contract is 3 fights which is about 1.5 years.

Do you want it to include all fighters?
 Or non-active fighters?
 The number will be much lower if I include current as we have signed so many new fighters latetly to one-off fights due for a local performance.
